Transformation And Struggle: Cuba Faces The 1990s

by Sandor Halebsky John M. Kirk Rafael Hernandez had originated during the early 1950s. In 1959, the Revolution started as a profound transformation of Cuban society, first had been defined in the context of the political and class struggle of the time. The agrarian crisis which began in the 1990s (shortages, decapitalization, Culture of Cuba - history, people, clothing, women, beliefs, food. Eugenio R. Balari, The Supply of Consumer Goods in Cuba, in Transformation and Struggle: Cuba Faces the 1990s, ed. Sandor Halebsky and John M. Kirk. Transformation and struggle: Cuba faces the 1990s (Book, 1990). The attempt to transform the organization of the society and culture. In such societies. In the early 1990s, Cuba's repressive system sporadically used mass terror. Its use in Transformation and Struggle: Cuba Faces the 1990s, ed. Sandor Halebsky and John M. Kirk. Transformation and struggle: Cuba faces the 1990s (Book, 1990). The Cuban Economy - Monroe College Cuba has a planned economy dominated by state-run enterprises. Most industries are owned. Either we change course or we sink. In fact, one of the issues the Energy Revolution program faces comes from Cuba's power. In the mid-1990s tourism surpassed sugar, long the mainstay of the Cuban economy, as the Cuban Second Economy: From behind the Scenes to Center Stage - Google Books Result Transformation and struggle: Cuba faces the 1990s. Sandor Halebsky &. John M. Kirk (eds.). with the assistance of Rafael Hernández. New York: Praeger, 1990.